

Dining In

By Laura Whiston

The current trend for eating in rather than going out has seen a rise in various culinary trends – from people cooking their own meals or buying from a local delicatessen to ordering in pizza or holding a barbecue. Not only is there a shift in food sales, but people are also investing in the dining room itself, from buying a new table and chairs, to converting the conservatory into a new place to dine. Given that radical reinvention might be out of the question at the moment, this issue Living In has put together some alternative ideas on how to revamp or redecorate your dining room – for example, you could invest in fresh new wallpaper with a matching table runner and napkins, or a new porcelain dinner service in a fresh, summery colour on which to serve your newly honed culinary creations. All of which should make sure that entertaining at home is as pleasurable as eating out...

www.globalvillage.ie

www.hedgeroe.ie

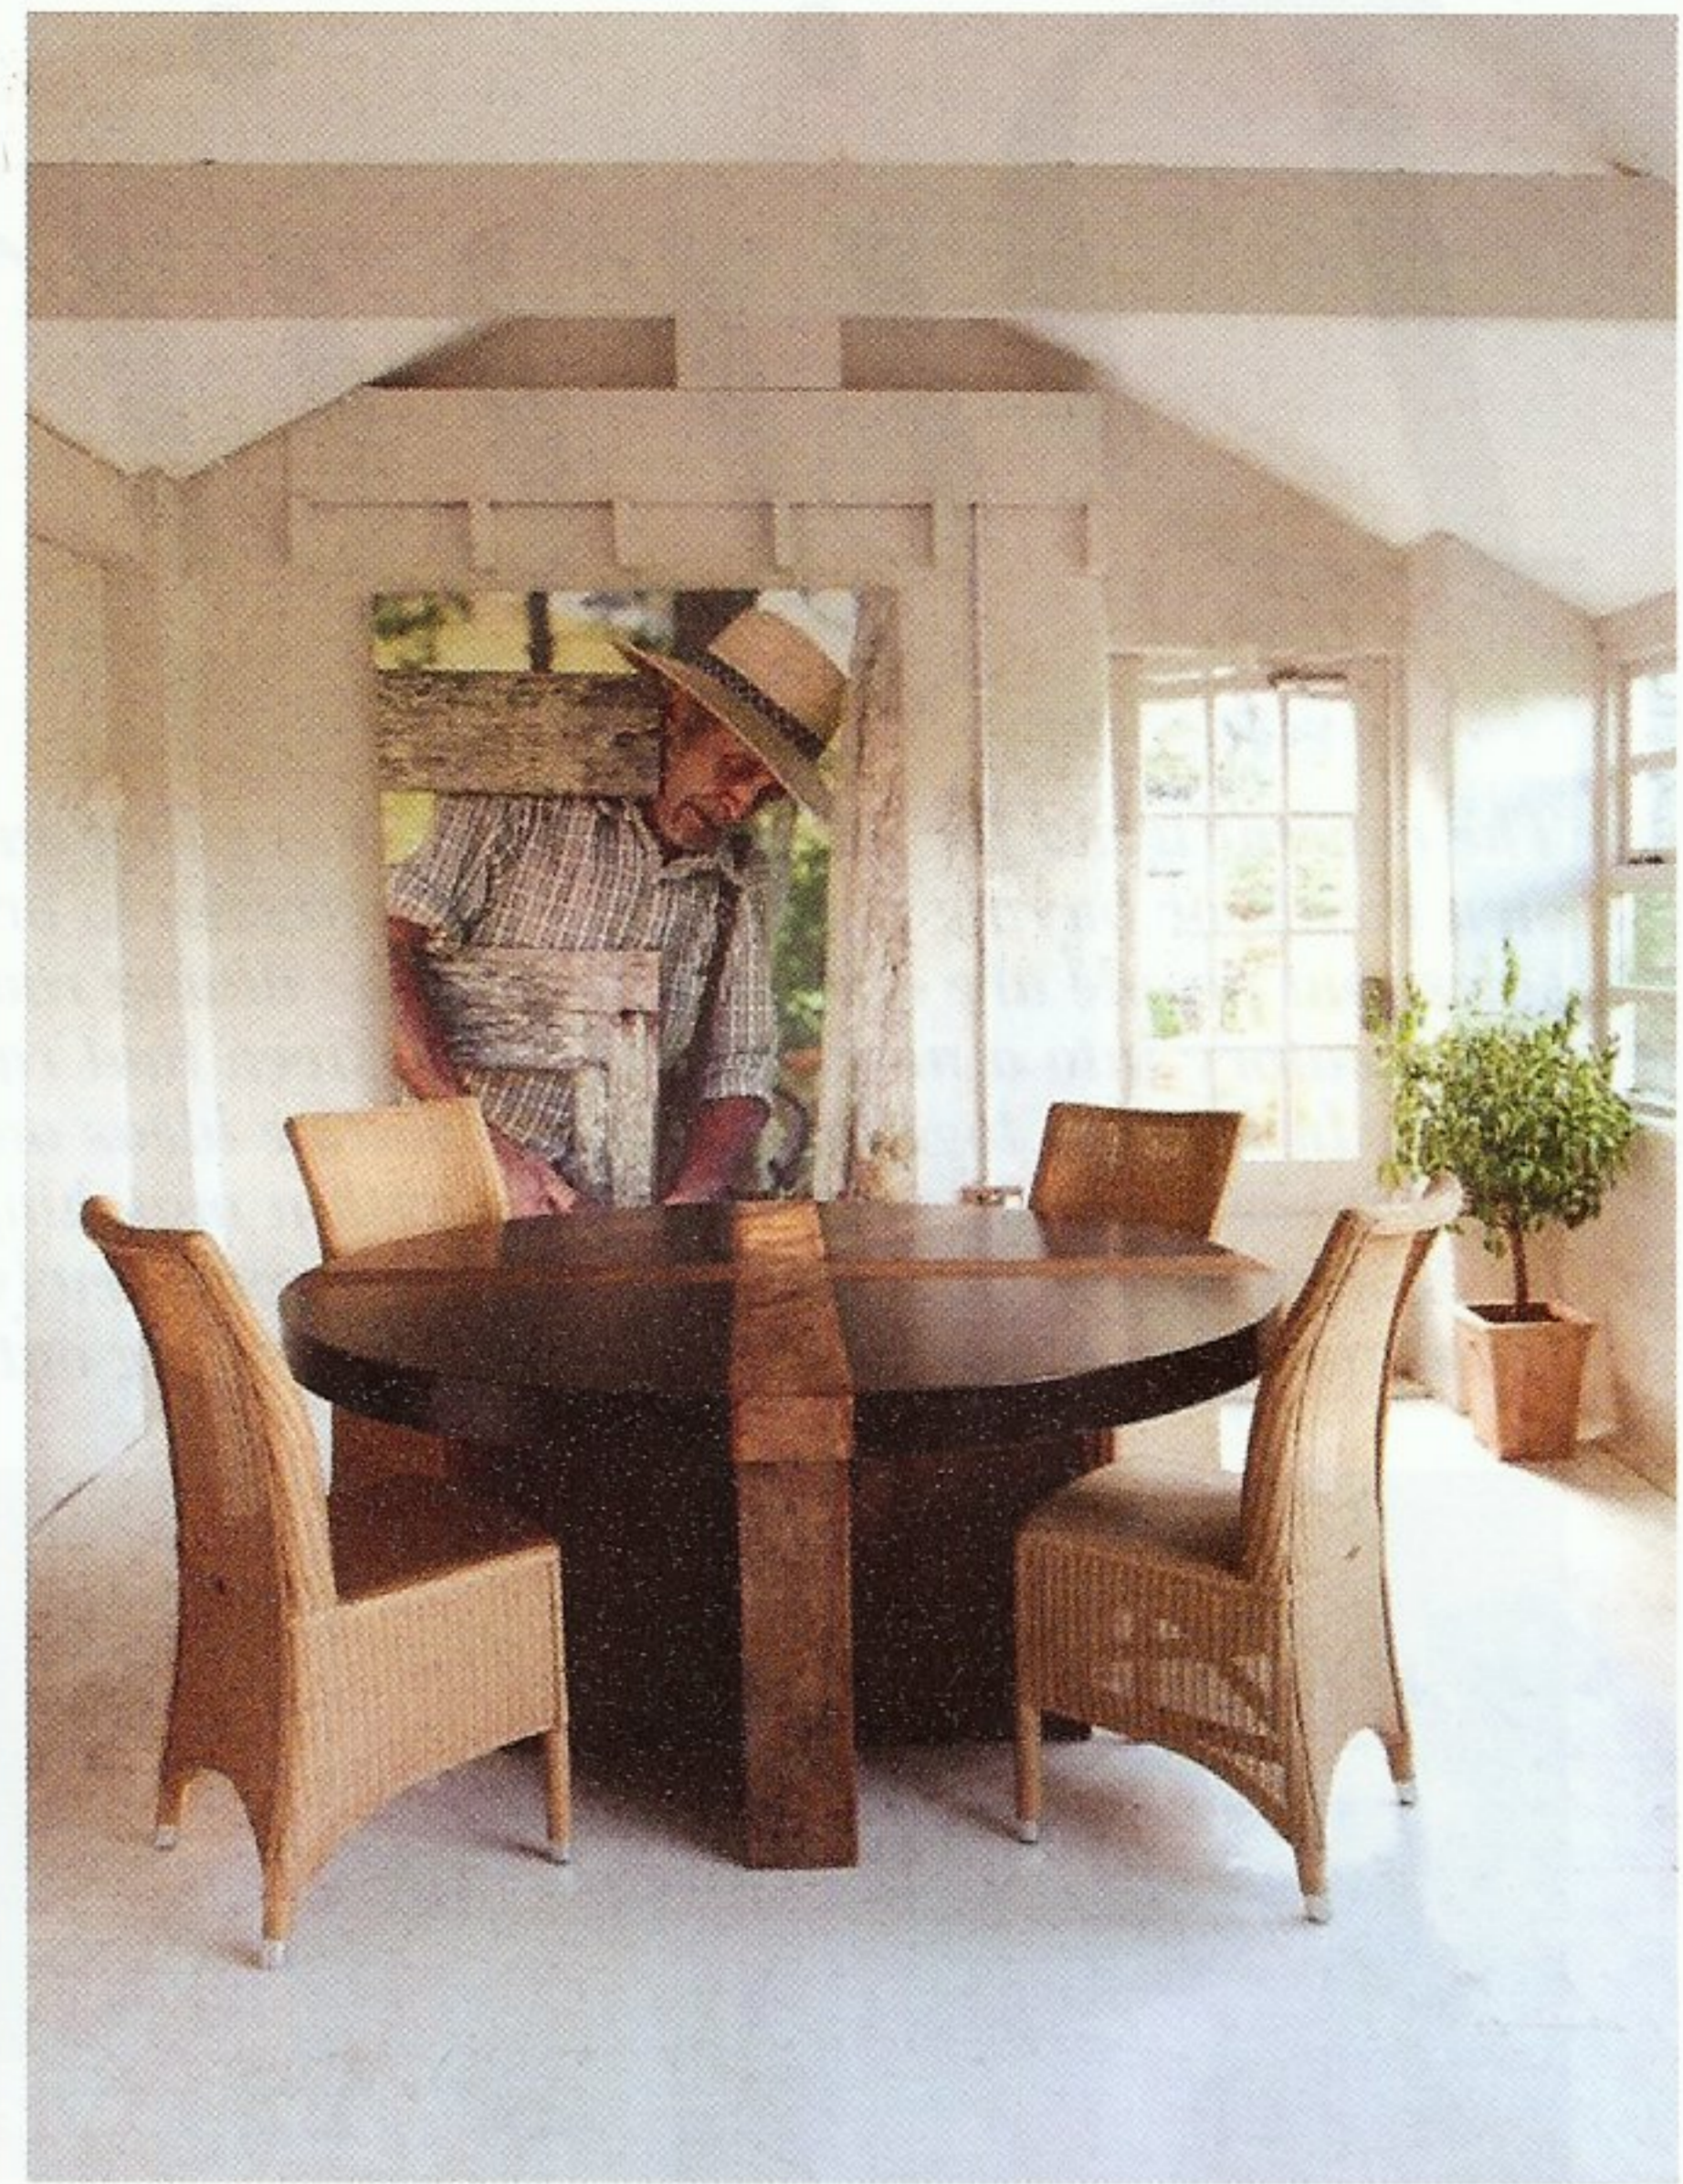

www.globalvillage.ie

www.hedgeroe.com

www.hedgeroe.com

www.maisonchateau.com

www.maisonchateau.com

www.kaininternational.ie

FourSeasons Tablecloths JAB Anstoenz, www.furnishing.ie